WOW,
THERE'S A MOUNTAIN.

It's funny for us to hear the things new visitors find surprising. Albuquerque holds plenty of them, but the two-mile high Sandia Mountains crowning our city seem too obvious to be a surprise.

Our mountains give us mild days and cool evenings, perfect for shopping, outdoor dining, art gallery walks, and cycling or hiking the mountain trails.

Once you're familiar with the mountain, an even larger feature reveals itself—our unique blend of Native American, Hispanic and Western cultures shaped naturally over thousands of years.
